Mr. Yapp,

If the classes they take pertain to the persons certification, then they can use the 32 hours of the continuous education.
NFPA 72 is a good,

I am inquiring about your CPD requirements. I represent California Electrical Training, Inc. an approved school with the Division of Apprenticeship Standards in California under the Los Angeles Unified School District; we have been a member of the Educational Committee of National Fire Protection Association for the past 20 years.

The DAS also requires all fire/life technicians to become certified by passing the state certification examination. The state requires these fire/life safety technicians to complete 32 hours of continuous education by an approved school. We have been conducting 32 hour classes on NFPA 72 to satisfy the state requirements. Does our 32 hour course satisfy your CPD? If not please let us know how our course can satisfy your CPD.
